

A. My script idea will be for making the user's review display on the page. This will make reviewing actually impact things like the overall rating, displaying the text for the review, and so on. It will live on a new review page that I will be making.

B. This script's main goal will be to display dynamic content based on user input (the review).

C. There will be three parts to the review; your overall rating, your review content (the text), and your 'background' (new to gaming, casual, etc). When the user hits submit, the script will take all of that info, compute the new overall score, and then display it alongside the review.
